LOVE IN THE TIME OF AN APOCALYPSE Luqman Morrison

In this dangerous apocalyptic tale, the end of the world is near and it's up to a small team of people to stop it from happening.

May 12, 2019 changed the world forever. When a NASA observer spots a very large asteroid heading toward Earth he knew it could destroy every remnant of civilization forever. He calls a fellow observer who examines the asteroid through a telescope and verifies that it is in fact real.

The asteroid is not only very real, but closer to Earth than they thought. So close that it could hit in less than two weeks. That's less than fourteen days to figure out how to stop this massive rock from plunging into Earth.

When their boss, Kieran, finds out about the asteroid he informs Alex, who calls George Olsen's office to tell him the call was in reference to protocol J798—an apocalyptic event.

One day later, NASA gathers seven of the world's most prolific scientists to determine how to prevent the asteroid from obliterating Earth. This phenomenal team of scientists includes an eclectic blend of people from USA to Russia.

But can this team of world-renowned scientists, engineers, mathematicians, and physicists find a way to stop the asteroid that threatens to end it all? Or will everything be lost in a moment of panic?

With a hint of romance, Love in the Time of an Apocalypse is not your average end of the world story. It's so much more. This thrilling read will have you on the edge of your seat, up all night long, desperate to find out what happens next.

Once you start, you won't be able to stop.
